Synopsis: Welcome to Lighthouse Bay, a charming coastal town where the waves whisper secrets and love blooms amidst the salty air. In 'Month to Marry the Midwife,' two dedicated midwives find themselves caught in a whirlwind of emotions as they navigate the complexities of love, friendship, and the unexpected challenges life throws their way.

Grace knows the routine of her life in Lighthouse Bay like the back of her hand: delivering babies, baking scones, and spending time with her beloved dog, Luna. She's content with her quiet existence, until a letter arrives that turns her world upside down. Her estranged father has passed away and left her his cottage in town.

Returning to Lighthouse Bay after years away, Grace is determined to sell the cottage and move on. But when she meets Dr. Ethan Ramsey, a handsome and enigmatic surgeon who's new to town, she finds herself torn between her duty to the past and the allure of the present.

Meanwhile, her fellow midwife, Maddie, is struggling with her own romantic turmoil. Engaged to the town's mayor, Maddie finds herself questioning everything when she meets Will, a charming and adventurous fisherman who challenges her long-held beliefs.

As the month leading up to the wedding draws near, Grace and Maddie must confront their own hearts and make choices that will shape their futures forever. Amidst the laughter, tears, and joy that comes with being a midwife in a small town, they discover that love can come in unexpected ways and that sometimes, the best plans are the ones that unravel.
