The Declined D4 D5 E4 Dxe4 And D4 Nf6 opening presents several key strategic considerations for both sides:

- Control of the center: White's primary goal is to establish control over the center of the board. By advancing the d- and e-pawns, White aims to create a strong pawn structure that restricts Black's mobility.
- Development: White should focus on developing their pieces rapidly, particularly the knights and bishops. This will allow them to put pressure on Black's position and create threats across the board.
- King safety: White must be mindful of their king's safety. The early d4 and e4 advances can expose the king to attack, so it's crucial to protect it with pawns and pieces.

- Development and piece activity: Black should strive to develop their pieces quickly and effectively. The knight on f6 is particularly strong, as
